Directors' Notes

Mr. Chris Fallows (Director)

Welcome and thanks for coming! The students have worked hard off and on stage to make this show happen, and I love them.

The movie Mean Girls is a 21st century classic. It has quotable lines and is clever and hilarious. The musical features the witty writing of Tina Fey and the wonderful, catchy music of her husband, Jeff Richmond. But I like the film and the musical version you are about to see because it teaches a powerful truth: All of us have been burned by mean people. Most of us have a "Burn Book" at least in our heads, that we remember and review and read off to other people sometimes. But we, all of us, have also done some burning of our own. We tend to spend far less time working on eliminating our own cruelty, which we can control, and far more time worrying about and talking about other people's malice, which we can't control. While it is absolutely true that we have been hurt by others, Ms. Norbury suggests that "Maybe we should take a break from being victims in this situation, and take responsibility for our own actions." Most shows at Heritage are chosen with this theme in mind. This show is no exception.

Mrs. Hillary Pedrotti (Technical Director)

It has been nearly 20 years since the first show at Heritage opened and I have been a part of every one of them. With just 2 more years until I retire, making sure things can happen without me is on my mind. To that end, teaching students to create projections and learn the system that until now, only I knew how to use, needed to happen and this show was the perfect starting point. Kat Young and her crew have exceeded all expectations in creating the projections for this show. The new system allows us to incorporate both still and moving images and the talent of these young women solved all problems and created projections that rival the Broadway touring production. I am so proud of them. The crew heads and their crews continue to show the greatest maturity and competence both preparing for the show and running all the details backstage. I wish you could see all the work they put in to make the show look effortless. I will miss the seniors when they graduate, but I am confident they have trained their replacements and the quality and degree of detail will continue after they are gone, and, if I am following my own policy, I will need to find and train my replacement before I "graduate." Any takers? You will not be sorry! Thank you for supporting our program, Enjoy!
